1.0 Project Overview and Background

1.1 Background

The Slocan Lake and River Partnership (SLRP) is a multi-party initiative that brings together the Sinixt Confederacy, the Syilx Okanagan Nation, the Regional District of Central Kootenay (RDCK), the Villages of New Denver, Silverton and Slocan, and the Governments of British Columbia and Canada. The Partnership works to conserve, protect and restore the ecological health of the Slocan Lake and River watershed and to provide guidance that informs land and water use decisions. The RDCK provides administrative and contracting support to the Partnership and will hold and administer this contract.

This work seeks a qualified consultant to complete a Sensitive Ecosystems Inventory (SEI) of the valley-bottom floodplain and riparian ecosystems of the Slocan River and Little Slocan River. The work builds on earlier inventory efforts in the watershed, including the 2012 Slocan River Streamkeepers SEI and later mapping of the Little Slocan River and Little Slocan Lakes, and applies current provincial standards so that results are consistent, defensible and suitable for planning use across the valley.

1.2 Why This Work Matters to the RDCK

The valley bottom of the Slocan and Little Slocan Rivers holds some of the most ecologically significant and most threatened habitat in the region. Mature black cottonwood floodplain forests here include the Fm01 Black Cottonwood, Snowberry, Roses ecological community, which is red-listed as threatened or endangered in British Columbia. These floodplains support a concentration of species at risk, including Western Screech-owl, Lewis's Woodpecker and the Coeur d'Alene Oregonian snail, and they perform critical watershed functions such as flood attenuation, streambank stability, water filtration, shade for fish-bearing waters, and habitat connectivity across the valley.

Most of this habitat sits on private land in the valley bottom, where development pressure is greatest. That pressure rarely arrives as a single large project. It accumulates through individual permit applications and private land decisions made without a view of the whole system, and the losses often become visible only after they add up. The RDCK is the local government responsible for land use planning and development permits in the affected electoral areas. To make consistent and defensible decisions, and to support tools such as Environmental Development Permit Areas, the RDCK needs a current, standardized and spatially explicit picture of where sensitive ecosystems are and what values they hold.

Much of the existing mapping is now more than a decade old and does not meet current standards throughout the study area. A refreshed and standardized SEI will give the RDCK and its partners a defensible evidence base to guide development, identify priority areas for conservation and restoration, support the Partnership's commitments to the Sinixt and Syilx Nations, and contribute to climate resilience and habitat connectivity in the valley. This project moves the Partnership from planning into a usable planning product.

1.3 Project Objectives

The objectives of this project are to:

- Produce a current, standardized Sensitive Ecosystems Inventory for the valley-bottom floodplain and riparian zone of the Slocan River and Little Slocan River.
- Delineate and classify environmentally sensitive areas and sensitive ecosystems, including low, mid and high bench floodplains, fluvial fringe, wetlands, and associated riparian communities.
- Attribute mapped ecosystems with rarity, condition, and known species-at-risk and rare-ecosystem values.
- Provide area-based planning recommendations and usable tools that the RDCK can use to inform Development Permit Areas, Official Community Plan updates, and conservation and restoration priorities.
- Deliver spatial data in a format ready for archiving with the Community Mapping Network (CMN) and consistent with a watershed-wide product.
- Support the Sinixt and Syilx partners in identifying cultural and archaeological values, handled under confidentiality and partner direction.

2.0 Study Area

The study area is the historic valley-bottom floodplain and riparian zone of the Slocan River and the Little Slocan River, mapped from valley wall to valley wall. It includes the cottonwood floodplain benches (low, mid and high bench), fluvial fringe, wetlands, and associated riparian ecosystems. Particular attention is given to the confluences and lower reaches of first, second and third order tributary streams where they cross the valley bottom and create cross-valley habitat linkages.

Indicative extent runs from the Kootenay River confluence at Shoreacres in the south to in the north along the Slocan River.

- Slocan River survey limits: approximately 59 km from the outlet of Slocan Lake to the confluence with the Kootenay River at Shoreacres, complete floodplain.
- Little Slocan River extent priority 10 km up to little Slocan Lake, with immediate priority first 6 km
- Small seeps and creeks that feed the system are confirmed as ecologically significant to the floodplain riparian zone and are to be treated as part of the study area, consistent with the emphasis on first, second and third order streams.

The total mapped area will be confirmed at project inception.

3.0 Scope of Work

The work is organized into seven tasks. Proponents may propose refinements to the approach within their submission, provided the objectives, standards and deliverables are met.

Task 1 Project Inception and Data Assembly

- Attend a project kickoff meeting with the SLRP Technical Advisory Committee and confirm scope, study area boundaries, schedule and communication protocol.
- Assemble and review available base data and existing inventories provided by the RDCK, Sinixt Confederacy and Syilx Okanagan Nation, Slocan River Streamkeepers, Slocan Lake Stewardship Society and others and identify data gaps.
- Submit a short inception report confirming the mapping standard, minimum mapping unit, field verification plan, and schedule.

Task 2 Sensitive Ecosystems Inventory Mapping

- Map the sensitive ecosystems of the study area through air photo and orthoimagery interpretation combined with field verification, following provincial Sensitive Ecosystems Inventory and Terrestrial Ecosystem Mapping standards (RISC).
- Classify ecosystem polygons using the provincial Biogeoclimatic Ecosystem Classification and site series and identify red and blue listed ecological communities using the BC Conservation Data Centre Ecosystems at Risk framework.
- Conduct field verification during the growing season sufficient to confirm mapping accuracy, with the level of field effort described in the proposal.
- Ensure mapping is consistent with, and where appropriate updates, earlier inventory in the study area so the result reads as one continuous dataset.

Task 3 Species at Risk and Rare Ecosystem Attribution

- Attribute mapped polygons with known and potential species-at-risk and rare-ecosystem values, drawing on the BC Conservation Data Centre and other available records.
- Identify areas of high ecological value, condition and sensitivity to support prioritization.
- Flag which values are suitable for public education products and which require generalization or screening because their precise locations are sensitive, for example species at risk that are vulnerable to disturbance.

Task 4 Environmentally Sensitive Areas and Area-Based Planning Recommendations

- Translate the inventory into environmentally sensitive area mapping that all members of the Slocan Lake and River Partnership (Syilx Okanagan Nation, Sinixt Confederacy, RDCK, the Province of BC, and the Government of Canada) can use. One example of use is the RDCK applying it to land use planning.
- Provide practical, area-based recommendations to inform Development Permit Area boundaries and provisions, policy direction such as Official Community Plan direction, and conservation and restoration priorities.

- Keep recommendations at a level that all members can adopt or adapt without further specialist interpretation.

Task 5 Geospatial Tools and Community Education

- Create geospatial tools and map products from the non-sensitive inventory layers that Partnership members and stewardship groups can use for education and outreach with community members. This may include an online map viewer or Story Map style (here is an example) product together with a set of presentation-ready maps.
- Build any public-facing tool from non-sensitive layers only. Parcel-level, restoration-site, cultural, archaeological, and precise species-at-risk locations are screened out or generalized before anything is made public, and public products are subject to Indigenous partner review before release (Section 7.0).
- Deliver the tools in a form the Partnership can host and maintain.
- Provide plain-language materials and map products that support community outreach. Delivery of community engagement is led by the Partnership, through the Slocan River Streamkeepers as the established mechanism, not by the consultant.

Task 6 Cultural and Archaeological Values

This task is governed by the Sinixt and Syilx partners. Cultural and archaeological values are to be identified only under the direction of, and with review by, the partners. This information is confidential, remains under the authority of the respective Nations, and is not for public distribution or inclusion in any public-facing product. The consultant supports this work as directed by the Coordinator and does not lead partner engagement.

Task 7 Reporting, Mapping and Data Delivery

- Prepare a draft and final technical report, a map set, and a complete spatial dataset with metadata, as specified in Section 4.0.
- Present findings to the Technical Advisory Committee at the milestones agreed at inception.
- Deliver data in a form ready for archiving with the Community Mapping Network.

4.0 Deliverables

All deliverables are to be provided in the formats and to the standards below or a proposed equivalent. Draft deliverables are subject to one consolidated review cycle before finalization. Final deliverables must incorporate that review.

6.2 Communication Protocol

The RDCK, through the SLRP Coordinator, facilitates the project. The consultant reports to the Coordinator, who is the single point of contact. The consultant does not engage the Technical Advisory Committee, the Indigenous partners, or landowners directly, unless agreement is established. All such engagement is convened and chaired by the Coordinator.

- Kickoff meeting at the start of the project.
- Written progress updates to the Coordinator at a cadence agreed at inception.
- Milestone review meetings at inception, draft, and final stages.
- For each review, the Coordinator distributes the draft, collects input from the TAC, the Steering Committee and partners, and returns a single consolidated comment set to the consultant.

6.3 Milestone Reviews

Payment may be tied to acceptance of milestone deliverables. Milestones are inception, draft SEI and mapping, and final deliverables. The specific milestone and payment schedule will be set in the contract.

7.0 Data, Confidentiality and Licensing

The following terms apply to this Scope of Work and are in addition to the RDCK standard contract conditions.

- Ownership - All deliverables and data prepared under this contract become the property of the RDCK and the Partnership, except that cultural and Indigenous data remain under the authority of the respective Nations.
- Confidentiality - Parcel-level, landowner, cultural and archaeological information is confidential and is not to be published or distributed. Sensitive layers are to be delivered as separate confidential products.
- Existing data and licensing - Some baseline datasets may be provided as reference. Any such data will be provided to all proponents on the same basis. Proponents may not assume rights to third-party data, and reuse of third-party data in a public-facing product requires a written licensing arrangement.
- Indigenous data - Cultural and archaeological information is governed by the Sinixt and Syilx partners and is not released without partner review and direction.
- Public release - No mapping, minutes or products are to be posted publicly before Indigenous partner review.
